Mr. Webster's career as a legislator presents a portion of his life which future genera-tions will study with profound interest. It exwas in the Councils of the Nation, which he en-tered without any previous training in the halls A similar movement has been made in Baltiof State legislation, but, as his first effort, to which we have referred, evinced, entered fully armed, and fully equal to the exigencies of his new position. He commanded from the first, the unqualified respect of the body in which he crim South Carolina or Georgia.
